

Richmond Palladium

16 November 1877

the mill property on the south, which was bought by Howard Cadwallader for $1,000.

The grand opening of the Trayer Chase piano ware rooms, at the corner of Main and Pearl streets, Tuesday night, was one of the most delightful musical entertainments of the season. The hall was crowded to overflowing, with a select audience, all of whom were equipped with elegantly printed invitation programmes. The performers were Prof. Levassor, Miss Rosa, Mrs. Chase, J. G. Zeller, and the Orpheus club. All acquitted themselves so well that we do not feel like attempting to make any special references. The entertainment produced a no less favorable impression for the instruments used than for the performers. All who were present went away convinced that no finer toned pianos can be found anywhere than are now manufactured in this city.

A striking circumstance.

We understand that the follow-son, and he still had of that most standing t schedule of about $40 questionin charged hi to defraud what infor from the boarded, a fore the gr if he did n it.

This bold tics comple from the fe him to di pocket ou $478.38 in up his first induced O his (Cron search for they found of course) ed into th